PENTHOUSE POLAROID PHOTO COMPETITION

The girls are first past the post in this month's Polaroid competition stakes. Angela Pellegrini of North Parramatta in NSW kindly contributed this photo of Sandy Gunn to brighten up our Loose Ends pages. Angela's keen camera work wins her either a Polaroid SLR 680 camera or a 35mm Auto Process system.

NO STRINGS ATTACHED

Stacy Cole is one of those girls who will never let go or give up once she gets her teeth into something. She's a strong-minded young lady who attributes her determination to an abbreviated childhood. At the age of nine, when her parents divorced and her father was given custody, Stacy became the lady of the house. "I decided right then never to give up on anything," says this ardent disbeliever in surrender. She feels that even sexual submission should be a sort of erotic triumph.

HELENKA

MOVING EXPERIENCE

PHOTOGRAPHY BY CHRIS DICKSON

Helenka Antas has got about a bit in her 24 years. Born of Czech parents in New Zealand, Helenka has been on the move from country to country, city to city for a good part of her life. Penthouse caught up with the roving blonde as she was doing a possible impression of being Adelaide's hottest attraction. At press time she was soaking up Queensland's winter sun on the Gold Coast, making plans for a trip to the United States later this year.

A CLASS APART

Most teachers have experienced the problem or truancy at some stage in their careers. Here's one who hasn't. There's no gold stars for guessing why 22-year-old Josephine Pease hasn't yet faced the wagging problem at the boys' high school she has taught at for the last year. The Globbie and pencil case brigade fall over themselves to get to Miss Pease's history classes and many have requested private tutoring at home.

SONJA

Sonja Ulovic went visiting her folks in Dubrovnik a while back. Dangling those unbelievably long legs in the blue Adriatic made a welcome change from the pace of her life as a model in Berlin. Figure worries went by the wayside for the duration — Sonja's mum apparently whips up the spiciest and tastiest cevacici in the whole of Yugoslavia. While not 100 percent certain of the nature of this dish, we are told that in no way, does it even vaguely resemble a battered slaw.

ERICA

The bewigged and berobed Rumpole lookalikes at the Old Bailey won't know what hits them — at 200 words a minute — if 18-year-old Erica Crisp achieves her ambition of being a top court reporter. She claims to have always been interested in the world's legal systems and she's got a picture of Perry Mason above her bed in East Cheam. He apparently goads her on to thoughts of rapid shorthand movements. After considering our verdict, and Raymond Burr, we find her thoughts innocent.

HILDA

Twenty-three-year old Hilda der Coster would have to be the best looking social worker in Belgium. She's certainly turned many a head in her home town of Brugge. Sadly, it's a fact that can't be appreciated by her boyfriend, Frederick, who's been blind since birth. Hilda touchingly relates the tale of how Frederick once stumbled across a cheese grater, and then claimed it was the most violent story he'd ever read. What an out-of-sight guy!

EMY

Graceful Emy Gomez is indeed a rare bird. The 24-year-old beauty is a blue-blooded Filipino aristocrat who can trace her ancestry back to the Spanish conquistadors of several hundred years ago. Emy's family owns a plantation on Luzon, the largest island in the Philippines, where they produce palm oil. Palm oil is a major Philippines' export, and with Emy doing the selling it's little wonder there's such a hot demand for the product.
